Preface

Wittgenstein's published works have largely appeared as posthumous publications which have been edited by his trustees.¹ We consider it useful to publish these catalogues of correspondences between the published material and the Nachlaß as a guide for scholars who wish to investigate the original manuscripts, which form the basis for the posthumous publications. The Nachlaß is taken as those writings which appear in G.H. von Wright's revised 1982 catalogue of the Wittgenstein Papers.²

Pichler's catalogue chronologically lists all the published works in both English and German editions and relates these to their sources, either singly or in groups. It further specifies the library in which the original Nachlaß material may be found and the Xerox volume and film number of the corresponding part of the Cornell microfilm copy of the Nachlaß (Ithaca, USA: Cornell University, 1967). The catalogue includes published texts which do not have a source in the Nachlaß, such as correspondence and notes of lectures and conversations. Pichler's catalogue of textual sources is preceded by a chronological synopsis which shows the year of composition of manuscripts, typescripts and dictations and gives a synoptic view of their representation in the published works.

Biggs's catalogue of diagrammatic sources describes a hitherto neglected aspect of the published material. Whilst the inclusion of diagrams might previously have been regarded as a curiosity of Wittgenstein's philosophical style, or as a symptom of an underlying visual thesis (cf. Biggs 1992³), their publication presents immediate difficulties for those who, for example, intend to encode the texts for computer-aided analysis. Thus a synoptic view is required of both the extent of diagrammatic use and its origin. The catalogue aims to provide an initial reference for scholars in this area. It is preceded by a clarification of the term "diagram". The catalogue identifies the occurrences of diagrams in the published works and gives a list of their sources in both the manuscripts and typescripts of the Nachlaß.

This monograph is principally based on the Cornell Xerox copy of the microfilm at the Wittgenstein Archives. The Cornell microfilm does not reproduce all of the Nachlaß. We were additionally able to use copies from Professor von Wright's private collection held at the Archives.

There are some difficulties to be addressed as regards the exact references to folios in the Nachlaß. For example, some of the originals appear paginated by hand on the Cornell microfilm. Others are originals which have printed pagination, e.g. MS 137. A third group contains material which has no pagination of either kind. Consequently, it may have occurred that libraries with Xerox copies of the Cornell microfilm have paginated their copies independently. As there are a number of ways in which "page 1" may be defined, e.g. the first folio, the beginning of the body copy, etc., it is necessary to adopt explicit conventions.

The pagination convention adopted in both catalogues is as follows:

- 1 Where the original is recorded as paginated, this pagination has been used.

1. Wittgenstein nominated G.E.M. Anscombe, R. Rhees, and G.H. von Wright as holders of the copyright of his unpublished writings.
2. G.H. von Wright (1982). "The Wittgenstein Papers" in: Wittgenstein pp. 35–62. Oxford: Basil Blackwell. Published in German as: G.H. von Wright (1986). "Wittgensteins Nachlaß" in: Wittgenstein pp. 45–76. Translated by Joachim Schulte. Frankfurt am Main: Suhrkamp. The catalogue was first published in: The Philosophical Review 78 pp.483-503 (Ithaca, USA, 1969).
3. M.A.R. Biggs (1992). "Continuity and Discontinuity in Visual Experience" Crítica XXIV pp. 3–15 (Mexico City).

- 2 Where the recorded pagination indicates whole folios, the recto and the verso are distinguished by the suffixes "r" and "v" respectively.
- 3 Where folios have printed pagination, this pagination has been used. Wherever these books are paginated by double-page spreads, i.e. the open book shows the same page number on both the left and right-hand pages, the pagination is distinguished by the suffix "a" for the left-hand page and "b" for the right-hand page.
- 4 Where the recorded folios are unpaginated, page 1 is defined as the first page of Wittgenstein's main text. For the material referred to in the catalogues we consider the main text to begin with the following words:
- | | | |
|---------|-------|--------------------------------|
| MS 112 | | "(Das Unaussprechbare..." |
| MS 114 | | "Ich kann..." |
| MS 121 | | "Vergleiche..." |
| MS 125 | | (covered text) "Jedes Wort..." |
| MS 126 | | "Eine Addition..." |
| MS 127 | | "Schränken wir..." |
| MS 134 | | "Sowie wir..." |
| MS 135 | | "Muß man..." |
| MS 143 | | "168. Dies ist..." |
| MS 144 | | "Man kann..." |
| MS 149 | | "it wrongly..." |
| MS 154 | | "Eine Beichte..." |
| MS 159 | | "Russell..." |
| MS 162b | | "Brüche ihrer..." |
| MS 172 | | "Man könnte..." |
| TS 222 | | "Aber sind..." (deleted) |
| TS 224 | | "Das Überraschende..." |
| D 301 | | "Logical socalled..." |

Certain manuscripts are recorded as partially paginated. We have therefore adopted the following practice in respect of:

MS 114 Paginated in the second part. The first part is described using convention 4 beginning "Ich kann...", e.g. MS 114-I p.1. The second part is described using the existing pagination 1–228, e.g. MS 114-II p.1.

MS 121 Paginated in the second part. The first part is described using convention 4 beginning "Vergleiche...", e.g. MS 121-I p.1. The second part is described using the existing pagination which runs 54-139, e.g. MS 121-II p.54.

MS 122 Occasionally paginated throughout. We follow this pagination and supply missing pagination within the sequence.

MS 130 Partially paginated. Pagination ends on p.93. We continue the page numbering until the end of the volume.

MS 148 Paginated in three different series. The first series runs 1-10, e.g. MS 148-I p.1. The second series runs 1-47, e.g. MS 148-II p.1. The third series runs 11-46, e.g. MS 148-III p.11.

MS 151 Partially paginated. Pagination ends on p.24. We continue the page numbering until the end of the volume.

TS 202 Paginated in the body text, with an additional preface and manuscript insertions. We have followed convention 4 beginning "Logisch-Philosophische Abhandlung" and we note Wittgenstein's typewritten pagination where it is applicable.

The dating of Nachlaß entries refers where possible to dates found in the text. Where no dates are recorded the dating follows von Wright's catalogue except where specifically stated to the contrary.

As both catalogues refer to the published editions of Wittgenstein's works, there is an extensive bibliography at the end of this monograph.⁴ The bibliography lists the first publications in whatever language. It also lists the first publication and revised editions in English and in German.

The expression "Wittgenstein's works" may be interpreted in a number of ways (also cf. Schulte 1992, pp. 29–37⁵). For example, there are those writings which have their source in manuscripts in Wittgenstein's own hand. There are also those which have sources in dictations made by Wittgenstein to others. Then there are the notes of his lectures made by his students that are not dictations. One might also distinguish notes made which recall Wittgenstein's ideas expressed in a conversational context or in correspondence. Thus one can identify a scale of sources within which an individual publication may be located.

In response to this diversity the bibliography of Wittgenstein's works is sub-divided into six parts: Part I, works by Wittgenstein without a source in von Wright catalogue numbers 101–311; Part II, works with sources in von Wright catalogue numbers 101–245 (manuscripts and typescripts); Part III, works with sources in von Wright catalogue numbers 301–311 (dictations); Part IV, notes of lectures and conversations (a selection); Part V, correspondence (a selection); Part VI, German anthologies and collections.

The two catalogues together thus provide a key to the Nachlaß by cross-referencing it to the published material, giving specific page references for both textual and non-textual sources.

The authors would be grateful for any information which may improve subsequent revisions of these catalogues.

A Source Catalogue of the Published Texts

Introduction

This catalogue indicates the sources of Wittgenstein's works published both during his lifetime and posthumously.¹ It serves first and foremost to trace the published philosophical work back to its origin in the Nachlaß as described by Professor von Wright in «The Wittgenstein Papers» (von Wright 1982: pp. 35–62 [von Wright 1986: pp. 45–76])². The catalogue also includes correspondence and a selection of lecture and conversation notes. The published works are listed in chronological order of publication.

Column 1 indicates the earliest date of publication of the text in any language. Columns 2 and 3 indicate the title of each publication in English and German respectively, including a reference to the edition upon which my research was based. Some publications derive from a number of sources; in these cases it has been necessary to itemize individual passages and to list their sources. Such passages are described either by page or paragraph references. This itemization has also been employed where it helps to give clarity, e.g. with reference to dates in the sources. A dash in Columns 2 or 3 indicates that there has been no corresponding publication in English or German respectively.

Several publications have appeared in more than one edition. For example, in the case of Vermischte Bemerkungen, the edition of 1977 contains fewer passages than that of 1978. In all cases the title appears under the date of the first publication. However, in the case of Remarks on the Foundations of Mathematics I have included an entry at 1956 and 1974 as the two editions are quite distinct.

Column 1 on the right hand page identifies the sources for publications represented in Parts II–V in the bibliography. I use the following abbreviations: MS = Manuscript, TS = Typescript, TSC = Typescript Cuttings, D = Dictation. The dating of the Nachlaß material in this column refers, wherever found, to dates in the originals. Where no dates are recorded the dating follows von Wright's catalogue except where specifically stated to the contrary. Page references conform to the system described in the Preface. A question mark in this column means that I was unable to find a source for the relevant published text as a whole, or for some part of it – in the copies I had at my disposal. This is the case with certain paragraphs of Remarks on the Foundations of Mathematics and two pages of Philosophical Grammar.

Column 2 on the right hand page identifies where the Nachlaß material in question is currently held (BLO = Bodleian Library, Oxford; ÖNB = Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Vienna; WLC = Wren Library, Trinity College, Cambridge). A question mark in this column

1. For the particular sources of the published diagrams cf. Biggs's catalogue.
 2. Reference to the German edition of the von Wright catalogue appear in square brackets following the reference to the English edition.

means that I have not been able to trace the location of the original. A dash in this column means that the original is missing.

Most of the Nachlaß appears in the Cornell copy from 1967. In the last column I identify both the corresponding microfilm roll number (upper number, cf. NWP 1989: p. 89³) and the corresponding Cornell volume number (lower number). A dash indicates that the source does not appear on the Cornell copy.

In terms of an overview of the relationship between the published and unpublished material, there have been publications from approximately one quarter to one third of the Nachlaß material. However, Wittgenstein's method of writing involved extensive revision and the repetition of various passages. Thus the «same» text may appear as rough draft in a notebook, as fair copy in several manuscripts, and then again in different typescripts. The total of c. 18,000 pages of the Nachlaß includes all such revisions and rearrangements. Nonetheless, the Nachlaß in its entirety offers much of importance to scholars interested in detailed analysis of the development of Wittgenstein's thought, his working method and matters of style.

The catalogue is preceded by a synopsis which gives an overview of the parts of the Nachlaß from which there have been publications. The items are listed chronologically and referred to by the von Wright catalogue numbers. Groups of manuscripts are distinguished comprising the catalogue numbers 101–104, 123–142, 144–180 (MS₁), manuscripts on loose sheets 143, 181, 182, 178 (MS₂) and the «Bände» 105–122 (MS₃). Typescripts are distinguished by the catalogue numbers 201–211, 213–221, 225–232, 234–236, 238–239, 241–245 (TS) and typescript cuttings 212, 222–224, 233, 237, 240 (TSC). Dictations (D) are referred to by numbers 301–311. Missing items are marked «(m)». I have used the following convention in respect to material with approximate dates: ↑ = the stated year and/or earlier, ↓ = the stated year and/or later, ca = approximately the stated year. The items from which publications have been produced are indicated by underlining. For Vermischte Bemerkungen the sources have not been indicated as it contains remarks from most of the manuscripts, i.e. Manuscripts 101, 105–113, 116–138, 145–147, 153a–b, 154, 155, 156a–b, 157a–b, 162a–b, 163, 165, 167, 169, 173–176, 179 and 180a. For detailed information concerning these sources see Pichler 1991⁴.

My particular thanks are due to Professor von Wright, to Jonathan Smith of the Wren Library, Trinity College Cambridge, and to my colleagues at the Wittgenstein Archives, Claus Huitfeldt and Ole Letnes. Special thanks to Michael Biggs for a most enjoyable collaboration.

There existed also a typescript, based on this manuscript. The printing of the book took place from the typescript <Typescript 234> which is now, unfortunately, lost.» MS 144 is held at the Wren Library. GB 1979: Introductory Note: «This particular typescript <TS 211> runs to 771 pages. It has a section, just under 10 pages long, of the remarks on Frazer, with a few changes in order and phrasing. Others are in different contexts, and a few are left out.»

A Source Catalogue of the Published Diagrams

Introduction

This catalogue provides a list of all of the diagrams which occur in Wittgenstein's published works and relates them to sources in the Nachlaß. I have defined a diagram as a graphic element which cannot be entered via a normal typewriter or computer keyboard. It is possible to construct some diagrams by combining characters from the ASCII graphics set but I have excluded this as unnecessarily complex. In general I include all those elements which must be bit-mapped. A bit-mapped image is one which has been copied or scanned from the original manuscript. I also include character-height arrows, e.g. catalogue number 1142, which can be found in the extended character sets of some word-processors. This catalogue gives a synoptic view of the extensive use Wittgenstein made of such non-textual material, some of which has necessitated colour printing. The scale of the feature has implications for book production and for the encoding of the text for computer-aided analysis.

Wittgenstein's writings have been published during his lifetime, published posthumously from the Nachlaß by his trustees, as dictations taken by students, through reports of conversations and through his correspondence. The objective of this catalogue is to identify diagrammatic use in the published work and to cross-reference those diagrams to sources in the Nachlaß in Wittgenstein's own hand. This range has sources in Wittgenstein's unpublished manuscripts and typescripts, where the original diagrams may be compared. I have therefore limited this catalogue to works with sources in von Wright's 1982 catalogue numbers 101–245. I have avoided using dictations, despite von Wright's assertion of their validity (1982 p.42), as they do not have a counterpart in 101–245. As a consequence I have omitted the diagrams in The Blue and Brown Books as both were dictations. However, the latter has a close relative in manuscript form (MS 115 p.118ff.) which is a revision of the earlier dictation. This was published in 1970 as «Eine Philosophische Betrachtung» and is included in this catalogue.

I have based this catalogue on the published works rather than the Nachlaß for three reasons. Firstly, for each of the published diagrams a definite editorial decision has been made that it is necessary in relation to the text. Future editors may come to use different criteria with regard to the remaining unpublished diagrams. However there is already a precedent for the use of c.500 diagrams in the published works to date. Secondly, there are occurrences where the editors record their decision to insert diagrams where there are none in the Nachlaß, e.g. Z §249, and on the contrary, to omit images where one may be found in the Nachlaß, cf. the preface to the second edition of TB. Such interesting documentation is only available in relation to the published works. Thirdly, the catalogue can also serve as a general index to the Nachlaß.

The catalogue is arranged according to the date of first publication. When a subsequent edition has resulted in a new image being published I have entered this under the date of its publication, i.e. RFM 1974, NB 1979. Most of the works were first published by Blackwell or Routledge and I have used these editions. PB 1964, WWK 1967 and PG 1969 were published by Suhrkamp and by Blackwell in the same year. There is no other difference between the two publications in any of these cases. However, the Suhrkamp Schriften includes «Eine Philosophische Betrachtung» which does not have an English counterpart.

A version of «Notes on Logic», dating from 1913, was first published by Costello in 1957. It contains no diagrams. Anscombe questioned its authority on several counts in a letter to the editor in the same journal.¹ Subsequently it was published as Appendix I in NL 1960. In a later article, McGuinness distinguished between the Costello version (TS 201b) and the more authentic Russell version (TS 201a).² This is acknowledged in the Preface to the second edition NL 1979 in which the Russell version is published as Appendix I. It contains one diagram which therefore appears in the catalogue under NL 1979.

I have followed the usual convention for the abbreviation of the titles of Wittgenstein's published works in English or German. Confirmation of the abbreviations used may be found in a footnote to each new title and a reference in the bibliography. In addition I have surveyed works which have been posthumously published in journals and which have a source in the Nachlaß. Only two of these contain diagrams, being LPE 1968 and UW 1976 pp.435-438. All of UW 1976 is listed although only parts of the article have a source in the Nachlaß.

The catalogue begins with number 1001 so that there is no confusion between image numbers and G.H. von Wright's numbers in his Nachlaß catalogue. Von Wright allocates numbers beginning 101 to manuscripts, 201 onwards for typescripts, and 301 onwards for dictations. The present catalogue numbering also allows for a Nachlaß-based catalogue of diagrams to be created using the series beginning at 2001.

The catalogue number is followed by the abbreviated title, the page in the published edition, the paragraph and, when necessary for clarity, a line reference in which suffixes denote multiple images on one line, e.g. 1024 PI 198 II-xi 27a. In the case of TB 1960 a date reference is substituted for the paragraph reference. The two dates are the date of first publication and the approximate date of the manuscript. Manuscript and typescript reference numbers correspond with the von Wright catalogue. Page references follow the convention described in the Preface.

In my listing of some typescripts, for example TS 232, there appears a suffix after the page reference. The suffix /G indicates that a gap has been left in the typescript for the insertion of a diagram from another source. The suffix /N indicates that there is no such space or other note that an image is to be included, though the surrounding text has been identified. In both cases there is no image in the typescript. Occasionally, for example in EPB and LW, I have used the same convention for manuscripts where verbatim transcription has taken place. In the case of TS 209, again for the sake of clarity, I have used paragraph references in place of page references in the typescript.

Some of the published works derive solely from manuscript sources, for example TB 1960. In these cases the sign N/A indicates that a typescript source is not applicable.

The total number of diagrams recorded in the catalogue is 479. However, for reasons given above, certain publications which contain diagrams are not included, e.g. BBB 1958. Some published works partially duplicate previous editions, e.g. RFM 1974. Some published works appearing in the catalogue contain diagrams with sources in the Nachlaß and diagrams taken as part of lecture notes, e.g. UW 1976. Finally, some diagrams are recorded twice, having one manuscript source whilst appearing in two different publications, e.g. catalogue numbers 1096 and 1199 (though they differ slightly from one another as printed). Because of the many ways in which the boundaries may be defined in any study of the diagrams, the present catalogue is not intended as a definitive quantification of Wittgenstein's diagrammatic use. However, it is intended to increase the awareness of his praxis and to begin to describe the factors which must be taken into account in any future quantification.

I would like to acknowledge the assistance given to me by the staff of the Wittgenstein Archives at the University of Bergen in the compilation of this catalogue, in particular to Claus Huitfeldt, Alois Pichler and Ole Letnes.

43. «Eine Philosophische Betrachtung» in: Wittgenstein Schriften 5 pp.117–237. Frankfurt: Suhrkamp Verlag, 1970.

44. EPB is based on Wittgenstein's manuscript revision of TS 310 contained in MS 115. The revision is not complete and the published EPB concludes with a German translation of the remainder of TS 310. It should be noted that EPB is therefore substantially different from The Brown Book (BBB 1958). The former is not currently available in English translation, nor the latter in German.

50. «Ursache und Wirkung: Intuitives Erfassen» Philosophia 6 pp.391–445 (Ramat-Gan, Israel, 1976).

51. This diagram appears twice, once in the context of the German text and once in the English text.

52. These references derive from lecture notes and therefore do not have a source in Wittgenstein's Nachlaß. They are included here because they form part of a publication which does contain such references.
